

I find it ironic that the very government which claims to be a model of democracy representing the interests of diversity, a government which, historically, has denounced socialism and communism as the most oppressive forms of government, would then be the very government which becomes one and the same with that which it has denounced. In socialism and communism, in dictatorships around the world it is the large, centrally controlled "public" services which, in reality, serve only the few. What is different with this "proposed" measure? I see none. Please maintain the decency and integrity of your stated belief system and keep the airwaves both public and diverse.
